Running tests on paper is holding your coaching back

Every batch means another stack of question papers to print, another evening lost to checking answers by hand, and another week before students get their results. By then the test is forgotten and no one learns from their mistakes.

Worse, you have no real picture of how your batch is doing. Who is slipping? Which topics is everyone getting wrong? Who copied from a neighbour? Paper tests simply cannot tell you — and parents increasingly expect more.

The everyday pain

- Hours spent setting papers and correcting them by hand, test after test.
- Results take days, so students never review while it still matters.
- No data on weak students, weak topics, or who is actually improving.
- Cheating and copying are hard to prevent in a crowded room.
- Question papers, keys and marks scattered across WhatsApp and notebooks.

BattleExam turns your coaching into an online test centre

BattleExam is a ready-made test platform built for coachings. Create a test from your own questions in minutes, send it to your students' phones, and the moment they submit, everything is graded for you — scores, rankings, and a clear breakdown of where the batch struggled.

Your students install it like a normal app and log in with just their phone number and a PIN. No laptops, no installs to manage, no paperwork. You stay in control; they just tap and start.

Create tests fast

A simple 3-step wizard builds a full test from your question bank in minutes.

Instant results

MCQ and numerical answers are graded automatically the second a student submits.

Fair & proctored

Shuffled papers, randomised question sets and tab-switch detection keep tests honest.

On every phone

Installable app feel, phone + PIN login, designed mobile-first for students.

Build a test in minutes

A guided three-step wizard — Basics, Questions, Settings — takes you from blank to published without any technical setup. Set a title, duration and a start/end window, pick your questions, choose your rules, and go live.

- Three question types: multiple-choice, numerical answer, and written (subjective).
- Pull questions straight from your own bank, and top up from a built-in previous-year-question (PYQ) bank.
- Set marks per question and negative marking to match your real exam pattern.
- Schedule a test to open and close automatically, or publish it instantly.

A question bank that stays organised as it grows

Your questions live in neat folders — Class, then Subject, then Topic — so even a bank of thousands stays easy to navigate. Add a question once and reuse it across as many tests as you like; nothing is ever retyped.

Class › Subject › Topic

Browse questions like folders on a computer. Find any topic in seconds.

Add once, reuse forever

Every question you add is saved to your bank and available for future tests.

Smart suggestions

Class, subject and topic fields suggest your existing values so naming stays consistent.

Rich questions

Supports maths/formulae, images and detailed solutions for review.

Grading done for you, the moment they submit

Multiple-choice and numerical questions are scored automatically on our servers — including negative marking — so a 60-student test is fully graded before you finish your tea. Written answers are gathered for you to mark yourself, with the model answer on hand.

- Automatic, server-side scoring for MCQ and numerical questions.
- Negative marking handled exactly as you configure it.
- Numerical answers accept a tolerance, so near-correct values can be credited.
- Written/subjective answers are collected neatly for you to grade by hand.

Fairer tests, far less copying

Because every student takes the test on their own device, BattleExam can quietly make copying pointless and flag suspicious behaviour for you to review.

Shuffled for each student

Option order is rearranged per student, so a glance at a neighbour's screen gives nothing away.

Randomised question sets

Optionally serve each student a random subset from a larger pool — no two papers identical.

Tab-switch detection

If a student leaves the test screen, it's counted and shown to you in the results.

Server-enforced timer

Time is decided by the server, not the student's phone clock — no buying extra minutes.

No attempt is ever lost

Phones die, apps close and networks drop — and a student should never lose a test because of it. BattleExam continuously saves progress in the background, so a student can resume exactly where they left off, and an abandoned attempt is still graded fairly from their saved work.

- Answers are auto-saved continuously while the test is in progress.
- Reopen after a crash and pick up from the last saved point.
- If a student never makes it back, the attempt is finalised automatically when time is up.

Motivate students with leaderboards

After each test, students can see a ranked leaderboard for that test — highest score first, with ties broken by who was faster. A little friendly competition keeps students coming back and pushing for the top spot, and their own rank is highlighted so they always know where they stand.

Know exactly how your batch is doing

Every test gives you a results dashboard at a glance: who submitted, the class average, the top score, and a full ranked list. Drill into time-per-question to see where students got stuck, and spot integrity flags at a glance.

Batch overview

Submissions, average score and top score for every test, instantly.

Ranked results

Every student ranked by score and speed — your toppers and your strugglers, clearly.

Time insights

See how long students spent per question to find the tricky spots.

Integrity at a glance

Tab-switch counts surface beside each student's result.
